Paid Research Opportunity for Girls

Would your daughter like to learn more about emotions and the brain?

The UW Department of Psychiatry and the HealthEmotions Research Institute are looking for girls, ages 9 to 11, to participate in a paid research study. Girls who are currently receiving treatment for anxiety or other emotional issues, or who have been treated for anxiety in the past are not eligible to participate. Girls who have braces are also not eligible to participate.

Earn a $10 gift card for completing a brief online survey at KnowYourEmotions.com.

Girls who qualify for the full study may receive up to $950 over multiple study sessions that include MRI brain scans, clinical assessments, behavioral tasks, and questionnaires about mood and health. Please visit KnowYourEmotions.com for more information or call the HealthEmotions Research Institute at 608-265-4380.

The HealthEmotions Research Institute is part of the University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health, Department of Psychiatry. The HealthEmotions Research Institute seeks to use state-of-the-art scientific methods to study the relationship between emotions and health. Understanding how states of mind influence the body is part of the next great frontier in brain research. The results will have profound consequences for our understanding of the biology of emotion, our concept of health, the prevention of disease, and the promotion of resilience.
